CHARLIE ROSS.

Was the Whole Story of His Abduction Put-Up Job 1-Some Suspicions Facts Im plicating Mrs Ross and the Philadelphia Chief of Police.

ODELL, LLL., August 27, 1875. Owing to the absorbing interest of the Beecher trial, doubtless many of your read ers have forgotten the once prominent "Charite Ross case," but in this locality it is likely to attract considerable attention yet. As some of your readers will remember, one Lewis Dungan was arrested in Odell, in August, 1873, for complicity in the absluction. The circumstances which led to his arrest are briefly as follows About the 20th of June, 1573, a woman clausing to be a Mrs. Cole, of Philadelphia came to Odell with a child about lot years old, and stopped with her brother one George Murkins, who lived about ha a mile south of town. On the night of the sen of July following, Dangan got off the train at Odell, and, as was alleged, accompanied by a child between four and five ars of age, and also went to Murkins the next day he was intro duced to some of the citizens of our town as a former friend of Murkins from Philadelphia. A few evenings after this Dungan and Murkins left Murkins' about dark in a closed carriage in the direction of Strestor. At midnight they stopped at Streator with one Hamilton, who is a brother-in-law of Murkins. Hamilton said they had a child with them at that time; that they left there in about an hour, ostensibly for Ottawa, Illinois; that they came back the next night at about the same hour without the child. On their return to Odell they claimed they had bee to Ottawa for the purpose of investing about $30,000, as they were expecting heavy remittances from Philadelphia; this, in view of the fact that Murkins was bankrupt and heavily in debt, excited suspicion that all was not right. On being question ed, Dungan became very much excited, and swore he would shoot any one who at-tempted to investigate as to his conduct. investigation, it was found that they had been to Ottawe to see a man his goods by express to "Madam Helen people. The deeper this matter is probed, the steps as may be necessary to compel the parties to testify. If the child was stolen, why should the mother refuse to say so? Or why should the Chief of Police set at defiance the process of a court of a sister State for the purpose of aiding a man whose detention he advised? If it is a fraud, it will be known before the present proceedings are ended, and the Philadelphia Chief of Police may appear in no very en-viable light; and the mother who has had the sympathy of the civilized world, may be shown to be the most heartless adven-turess that ever disgraced the form of woman,-Co.
